Chapter 2 by CuppaTea

According to Michael himself, there were five things that were necessary in order for him to be successful in life: A record deal, be a millionaire before reaching his thirties, a hot wife, cute kids and a vacation house located in the Bahamas.

(Un)fortunately at the tender age of seventeen was about reach one goal of his unrealistic bucket list, and to be fair, it wasn't the brightest for someone as young as him.

It was all going smoothly, Michael was graduating later this year, he had just bought an apartment near the studio so he could finally dedicate himself to his own music, he had a job at the local café where he would often get female attention and, from now and then, hook up with gorgeous girls whose names Michael didn't even care to recall.

He was content, until the very moment when his doorbell rang.

And there it was inside a picnic basket. a pink little human wiggling her chubby arms and legs featuring a toothless grin and tickles attached to her diaper.

"Heh Oh shit," Michael mumbled to himself as he looked down at the tiny blonde haired baby girl.

He held the child, unable to resist the urge to touch her. He observed closely every feature of her, from the freckles on her nose to the dimples on her cheeks.

Finally, after realising he had just gotten himself in a situation, in which he wouldn't be able to run away ( like he often did), Michael detached the note and read it out loud:

"This is Elle, she's turning one year old on the eleventh of june.
She's a happy baby who already sleeps the whole night trough.
I know this is very short notice and you must be feeling very confused, but I felt the way when I discovered that I was pregnant. My journey throughout this past year was full of pain and sacrifice. Earlier this year I was accepted in a really good university in Adelaide and can't provide for the both of us.
So for that matter I present you, in case you haven't realised yet, your daughter Elle Marie.

Sincerly Yours,
Kate."

And this is when Michael realised he was a father to an actual human and fucked beyond measures.
